Rosendo Rodriguez trial

Jurors began deliberating punishment at 10 a.m. today in the Capital Murder trial of Rosendo Rodriguez.

In closing statements, District Attorney Matt Powell told the jury that testimony and evidence presented indicates a strong likelihood that Rodriguez would offend again. He urged jurors to hand down the death penalty.

Defense attorney Rick Wardroup urged jurors to consider mitigating evidence about Rodriguez' family life and that Rodriguez has "found Jesus" while he's been incarcerated. Check back to myFOXlubbock.com for the latest updates today.
